

FamilySearch Indexing

Australia, Queensland—
Cemetery Records,
1811–1985 [Part B]

Some things to remember as you index this project:

- Index all names whether they have a surname or not.
- When a married couple is listed, index the first-listed person as the principal person in the record, unless only the spouse was listed with a death date. Then the person for whom a death date was recorded would be indexed as the principal person.
- Dates other than birth, marriage, or death dates should be recorded in the field to which they are most similar; for example, an engagement or anniversary date would be recorded in the Marriage Year field. In all cases, index the actual birth, marriage, or death date, if one is available, rather than the date of a similar event.
- If there is no clear indication of what a date stands for, index it in the Death Year field, unless an actual death date was recorded.
- Create a second record with the spouse as the principal person only if a death date was listed for both the husband and the wife.
- Dates listed with only two digits would be indexed with the prefix of 19.

As you view this presentation, sometimes a second slide will follow the image of a document to show how the document would be indexed.

The first person listed would be indexed as the principal. On this record the principal, Annie M, would have no surname recorded. Only one record would be created since there is no death date for the spouse. (See next slide.)

For record 17, the wife would be indexed as the principal since she has a burial date and her spouse does not.

Follow the same pattern for the rest of the records. This image would have a total of 27 records.

When a death date is included for each person, create a record for each person as the principal. If there is no death date for a person, create only on record, as shown for the couples in the purple boxes. Index the names in the order shown.

"MISTAKE" FIRE KILLED A DIGGER

NUI DAT (AAP). Aug 16 1969 ~~Australian~~
National Serviceman was killed and another seriously wounded when they were accidentally hit by bullets from an Australian Task Force sentry group.

A full investigation has been launched into the August 11 tragedy, which occurred in Phuoc Tuy province when the sentry group, operating in thick jungle, heard movement outside their perimeter and opened fires.

An army spokesman in Canberra named the dead man as Private Baron Frederick Smith, 21, single, of Toorak (Vic.).

Seriously wounded was Private Bruce John Ritchie, 22, single of Old Bar, via Taree, (N.S.W.), who is in the 1st Australian Field Hospital at Vung Tau.

The men were from 6 Platoon, Bravo Company, of the 5th Battalion.

Private Smith's death was announced at a battle casualty by the Army last Tuesday, when initial advice indicated the shooting occurred during an engagement with the enemy.

Meanwhile it was announced yesterday that Australian troops suffered light casualties in a fight with six Viet Cong guerrillas about 12 miles northwest of Nui Dat on Thursday.

Men from the 5th Battalion's 5 Platoon of Bravo Company saw the guerrilla group and opened fire, killing two and wounding one.

The Viet Cong — all in traditional black pyjamas — hit back with rocket-propelled grenades and automatic rifle fire.
